The history of water filters is indelibly tied to the history of water itself .As human industry has grown and water has become more contaminated ,water filters have emerged over the centuries in response to growing recognition of the need for pure clean water to drink and the realization that such water does not occur naturally .

In modern times ,concerns over water quality remain supreme .Over the years ,scientists have discovered more and more contaminants in fresh water sources and these same scientists have noted a strong correlation between drinking water contamination and many significant health problems .Due to the rampant impurity of water and the crucial ,physiological need for clean , fresh drinking water ,several treatment alternatives have emerged throughout the history of water treatment .Water filtration ,one of the more viable and prominent of these treatment alternatives ,has something of a remarkable past
